MODERN COMMUNICATIVE CULTURE OF THE EVENKS FROM IENGRA VILLAGE

Abstract

The factor connected with the cultural tradition of the Evenks determining the national and cultural peculiarities of verbal communication is explored. The current paper describes contemporary ethno-cultural processes and phenomena in the local group, in particular, the forms of everyday communication, their current state and place in the ethno-cultural context. The study of linguistic field work materials and publications of ethnographers and historians enabled to describe the use of lexical units connected with commandments and rituals among which we can see worshipping the spirits of the Nature, remembering Evenki roots, respect to the elderly and Mother. Proverbs and sayings are considered that reflect the above mentioned linguoculture traits as well as such important character traits of Evenks as modesty, deliberation and laconicity that are mostly appreciated in males.

Keywords: the Evenks, traditional culture, customs, national and cultural identity, communicative culture.
