

Leniza G. Habibullina
G.Ibragimov Institute of Language, Literature and Art, Tatarstan Academy of Sciences
Kazan, Russian Federation
valievalg@mail.ru

Concession relations in Tatar

Abstract

This article presents the structural and semantic features of constructions expressing concession relations in the Tatar language. The research is carried out on the material of examples from the texts of literature and folklore using the methods of linguistic description, modeling and transformation analysis. Concession relations are both formally and semantically related to causal, conditional, temporal relations, have complex semantics, therefore they are the most complex in the system of adverbial relations. The results obtained from the material analysis indicate that the semantic structure of concession contains the expected consequence at the same time expressing the absence of the expected consequence. Thus, according to its semantic content, the concession construction is three-component. One of the features of concessionary relations is the presence of modality in their semantics, since they, along with the description of reality, convey the position of the speaker.

Keywords: concession relations, semantic structure, causality, conditionality, temporality, field, microfield

© Habibullina L. G. 2022

For citation: Habibullina, L. G. (2022). Ustupitel'nye otnosheniya v tatarskom yazyke [Concession relations in Tatar]. Teoreticheskaya i prikladnaya lingvistika [Theoretical and Applied Linguistics], 8 (4), 166–174. https://doi.org/10.22250/24107190\_2022\_8\_4\_166